

The Politics of Cosmopolitanism:

Nam June Paik, Mega-Events and the Spectacle of Media Art

Jaeho Kang, Associate Professor, Critical Theory and Cultural Studies, Seoul National University

January 24, 2019 | 2:00 pm-3:30 pm | HG 1010

UCI Center for Critical Korean Studies

Co-sponsored by the Department of Art History, the Department of East Asian Studies and UCI Critical Theory.

Nam June Paik, Triangle, Trinity, 1998

Jaeho Kang is Associate Professor in Critical Theory and Cultural Studies in the Department of Communication at Seoul National University. He was Senior Lecturer in Critical Media and Cultural Studies at SOAS, University of London (2012-2018), Assistant Professor in Sociology of Media at the New School in New York City (2005-2012), and the Alexander von Humboldt Research Fellow at the Institut für Sozialforschung of the University of Frankfurt (2004-2005). He completed his PhD in social and critical theory at the University of Cambridge in 2004. Kang is the author of Walter Benjamin and the Media: The Spectacle of Modernity (Cambridge: Polity Press, 2014).