

UCI Undergraduate Writing Symposium Sustainable Compositions / Composing Sustainability

Friday, February 16th, 2018

9:00am - 3:00pm

Humanities Gateway 1030

Keynote Speaker

Shelley Streeby, Professor of Literature and Ethnic Studies, UC San Diego, and author of Imagining the Future of Climate Change: World-Making Through Science Fiction and Activism (UC Press)

Support undergraduate writing and promote climate action by joining former Writing 39C students as they present Advocacy Papers that address a range of issues stemming from global climate change. This interdisciplinary event is open to the public and encourages anyone interested in composition, sustainability, activism, and cross-disciplinary collaboration to attend.

Event made possible by UCI Humanities Commons, UCI Composition Program, UCI Community Resilience Projects, and UCI Climate Action Training Program
