January 1 - March 31

The LARB Publishing Workshop offers five weeks of inspiring and candid discussions with innovative leaders in publishing, workshops to hone professional skills, and the opportunity to join an exciting new generation of literary professionals.

The LARB Publishing Workshop recognizes the tremendous role the publishing industry plays in shaping cultural conversations. Our aim is not only to train our Workshop Fellows for publishing as it currently stands, but also to revolutionize the industry and the cultural landscape from the ground up by increasing access, facilitating change, and inspiring innovation through the recruitment, training, and mentorship of early-career talent from diverse backgrounds.

Featured speakers: Nicole Counts (One World), Rebecca Saletan (Riverhead Books), Adam Levy (Transit Books), Yanna Demkiewicz (Milkweed Editions), Katie Dublinski (Graywolf Press), Evette Dionne (YES! Magazine), Lori Dorr (The Paris Review), Gerald Maa (The Georgia Review), Gwydion Suilebhan (PEN/Faulkner), along with 50+ others!

Workshop Fellows have gone on to create their own literary ventures or land jobs at journals, agencies, and presses such as Farrar, Straus & Giroux, Hill Nadell Literary Agency, Penguin Random House, Red Hen Press, Harvard University Press, Stanford University Press, PEN/Faulkner Foundation, and W. W. Norton & Co., among many others. Join this vibrant and growing alumni network by applying today!

The program is open to graduating college seniors, current graduate students, and people with relevant experience and interest in entering the publishing industry. Need-based scholarships are available.
