

Ac Eng 29: Introduction to Graduate Research Writing

OPEN TO STUDENTS
FROM ALL LANGUAGE BACKGROUNDS!

This course introduces key components and skills for successful graduate-level academic writing. Topics cover: summarizing and synthesizing sources, understanding appropriate source use conventions, developing and organizing ideas for research writing, revising and editing, etc.

As the first of the graduate writing series, this course helps new graduate students develop a fundamental understanding of graduate writing necessary for more advanced tasks such as academic publishing and thesis/dissertation writing.

COURSE OFFERING FOR FALL 2021:

Enroll today!

20169 Du, Q. Wed 1:00-2:50pm

Dr. Qian Du is an Assistant Professor of Teaching and Associate Director of the Program in Global Languages & Communication. She received her Ph.D. in Education from the Ohio State University and is experienced in teaching graduate-level writing courses for students from STEM disciplines and social sciences. She has published in major journals in the field of English for academic purposes and intercultural rhetoric.